Major Doswell married Miss Fannie A.
Sutton, daughter of the late James T. Sutton, Esq., of Hanover, and a sister of Major P. T. Sutton and the late William M. Sutton, of this city. Major Doswell leaves one son, Mr. T. Bernard Doswell, and tour daughters, Misses Sallie, Ella and Norma, and Mrs. Allen Tyler, of this city.

No man of his day had more or warmer friends or attached them to him more closely than Major Doswell. His warmheartedness and genial nature, his refinement and high sense of honor drew those to him with whom ne was brought in contact by strong ties of regard and affection.

Just HOME.

Ical Society yesterday was dicative of any great interest in the proposed movement to hold a State Fair this formative of any great interest in the proposed movement to hold a State Fair this formative of any great interest in the proposed movement to hold a State Fair this formative of any great interest in the proposed movement to hold a State Fair this formative of any great interest in the proposed movement to hold a State Fair this formative of any great interest in the proposed movement to hold a State Fair this formative of any great interest in the proposed movement to hold a State Fair this formative of any great interest in the proposed movement to hold a State Fair this formative of any great interest in the proposed movement to hold a State Fair this formative of any great interest in the proposed movement to hold a State Fair this formative of any great interest in the proposed movement to hold a State Fair this formative of any great interest in the proposed movement to hold a State Fair this formative of any great interest in the proposed movement to hold a State Fair this formative of any great interest in the state of any great interest in the posed movement to hold a State Fair this formative of any great interest in the state of any great interest in the specific of any great interest in the state of any great interest in the posed movement to hold a State Fair this great in the proposed movem

Major Doswell was one of those happily constituted men that never grow old. His nature caught and reflected the sunlight of contentment. He loved genial life, and lived in atmosphere that for nearly seventy years held at bay the ravages of time and disease. He was one of the sign-posts along the pathway of life which reminded the present generation of the times that produced men of a mould that is now scarce. His dealings with the world were varied and wide, but always marked with an uprightness that was unimpeachable. He was widely known both in and out of the state, and universally respected.

LIFE AS A TURFMAN.

in the series of regard and affection.

X TH SHOME.

Nince he returned to his old home at "hairfuled," the popularity and the popularity and the properties of the properties of the popularity and the pop

The later of the limits that a property of the limits that a prope

THE TIMES—RICHMOND, VA., PRIDAY, JULY 18, 1890.

THOUSE WALLES PROVED ALL MANY AND ARREST COLUMNS AND ARREST

MINIATURE ALMANAC, JULY 18, 1890